Crypto News

A recent increase in sightings of cougars may force wildlife officials to rethink the notion that they're extinct in the Eastern US. A year ago the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declared that the big cat no longer existed in eastern states. But earlier this month a journalist at the Recorder Newspaper in Greenfield, Massachusetts, reported sightings of Cougars on a farm near the Vermont border, by an Amtrak engineer.

2012 and the MAYAN CALENDAR

Some consider it a bad joke while others are scared stiff they might never see next year thanks to the Mayan calendar's apocalyptic prediction.

Enter Mayan expert Leonzo Barreno, who says Mayan elders taught him that December 21, 2012 simply marks the beginning of a new calendar. He says that the apocalypse concept is a false interpretation of the long count calendar. Mr. Barreno immigrated to Canada 23 years ago and was trained by Mayan elders to read the calendars. When he grew up and during his training, he never heard the words "end of world" "Never were those words spoken from the elders or the spiritual leaders".

He states the inscription describes the return of a god Bolon Yokte, at the end of a 13th period of 400 years known as Baktuns, on the equivalent of December 21, 2012. It is the end of a cycle of 5,125 years since the beginning of the Mayan Long Count calendar in 3113 B.C. The fragment was a prophecy of the ruler Bahlam Ajaw who wanted to plan a passage of the god.

For the Mayans this will be a joyous event not an apocalyptic event. For what is really coming is the end of a calendar and the beginning of a new one. Mayans saw time as a series of cycles that began and ended with regularity, but with nothing apocalyptic at the end of a given cycle.

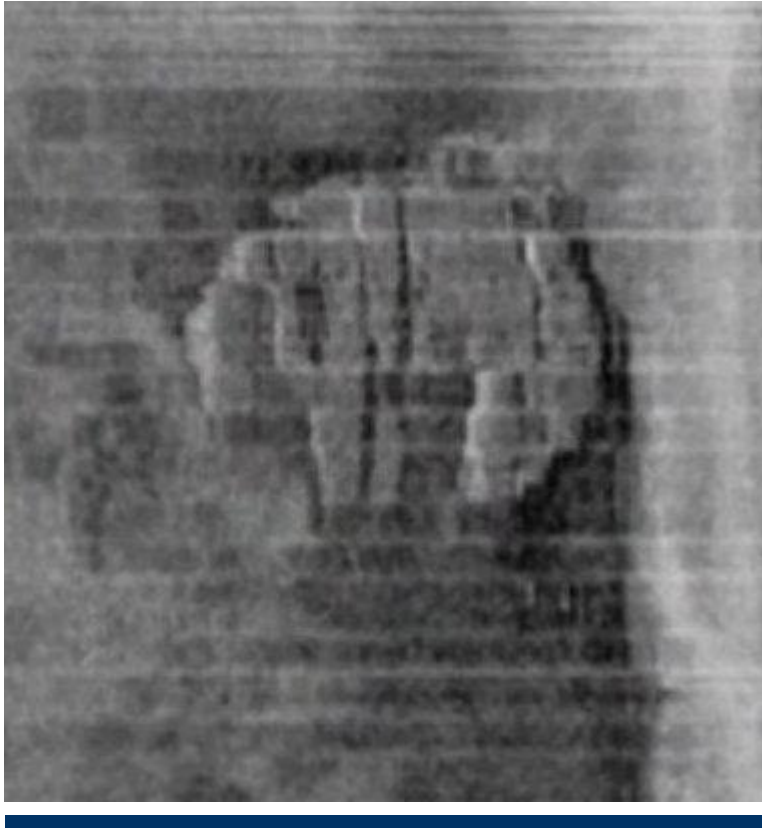

It's cyclical, it has happened before. This is the fifth time it's happened according to Mayan elders. Last month a German expert Sven Gronemeyer stated the calendar might have been misread and added he also believes it is simply a calendar change. Mr. Gronemeyer said his decoding of a Mayan artifact with a reference to 2012 shows a transition to a new era in the 5,125-year calendar. According to Carl Johann Calleman the Mayan calendar actually ended October 28, 2011, and the reason for the difference? The days lost in the change from the Gregorian to the Julian calendars in the middle ages.

Note: The Mayans also dismiss the apocalyptic predictions as largely a Western idea. It sure did sell books, gold, and everything from survival gear to bomb and anti-asteroid shelters. The conference speakers made out also as they put forth to the masses something they had no idea about. Movies, TV shows and the media made points on an upcoming event they knew was not going to take place.

The so called experts in the field sprang from nowhere with no training or background in the Mayan culture, religion or the calendar and relied on soothsayers, fortune tellers, Jeane Dixon and Nostradamus to name a few for their information. When these alleged experts and authors were challenged by academia they fell silent. The Internet rumors and the folks hunting “Fortune and Glory” are behind this for profit scenario. Our research into this hoax and misinformation comes to an abrupt end as the “Y2K” scenario in 2000 and the “Rapture” part (1) and (2) of 2011 did. One thing for sure Mexico’s tourist economy looks to double this year.

So...“Live long and prosper.” Everyone knows the world will come to an end when “SKYNET” takes over.
